

TRAINING ENGLISH TEACHERS

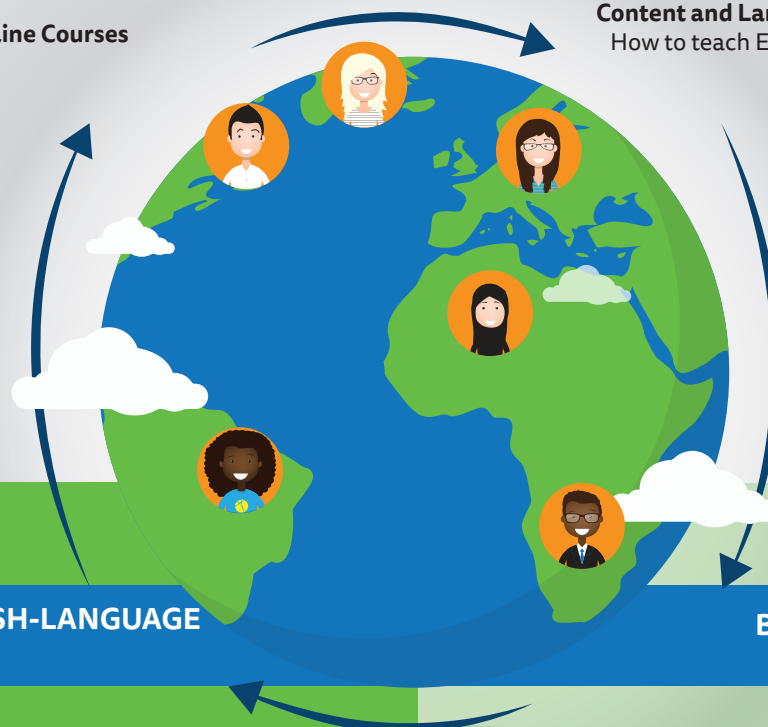

World Learning's School for International Training has been educating English language teachers for more than 50 years and in more than 20 countries. We offer:

 SIT Graduate Institute Master of Arts in TESOL

 SIT TESOL Certificate

 American E-Teacher Online Courses

 International Teacher Exchanges

HELPING ENGLISH TEACHERS DEVELOP THEIR CAREERS

We offer customized certificate training courses to enhance the expertise of beginning and experienced teachers. Our courses—which can be taken online, face-to-face, or blended—include:

English for Communicative Language Teaching: For English teachers looking to polish their own English skills

Teaching English as a Medium of Instruction: How to teach other subjects, like science and mathematics, in English

Content and Language Integrated Learning: How to teach English through other subjects

Technology for the Low-Resource Classroom: Creative teaching approaches for low-tech environments

Youth Programming: Teacher assistant programs and language clubs for students

STRENGTHENING ENGLISH-LANGUAGE EDUCATIONAL SYSTEMS

We work with institutions—including administrators and teachers—to strengthen their ability to provide English language training. We:

 License and build the capacity of TESOL training centers

 Assess and advise external English language programs

 Build language teacher organizations and networks

 Support English language education reform in public schools and universities

BUILDING LEADERSHIP SKILLS

Participants in our programs become leaders who continue to encourage English language training in their communities. Our face-to-face and blended course options include:

 Certificate courses for language program managers, language supervisors, and for the training of trainers

 Mentoring programs in curriculum and materials development

 English for Researchers, which helps teachers gain the English skills to get published and become thought leaders

Our TESOL programming encourages people to engage in lifelong English language learning—and gives them the tools they need to do so. We help them build soft skills, too, fostering collaboration and intercultural communication in everything they do. Ultimately, our participants use their newfound language skills to open the doors to better job opportunities and better learning.

English is increasingly vital to success in higher education and the 21st-century workplace. It is the de facto language of global business, academia, and travel. It accounts for about 85 percent of internet content and 90 percent of peer-reviewed science research journals. Simply put, English opens doors to better opportunities, new possibilities, and diverse cultures.

World Learning envisions a world in which all people can access English language education. It starts with teachers. We believe that when teachers are better educated and better equipped, they are better positioned to motivate and empower their students. We pursue that vision through our comprehensive array of TESOL programming.

Our approach is distinct. Founded in American educational philosophy, World Learning weaves the experiential learning cycle—which encourages participants to reflect on their own learning experiences and incorporate those reflections into their teaching—into all our training. We challenge pre- and in-service teachers’ perceptions of learning and encourage them to see their classes as groups of individuals with individual needs. This transformative process results in deep, sustainable changes to English language education.

In our intensive and customized training courses, teachers come away with new thought processes that allow them to step back and analyze their classrooms to understand how people learn best and why particular methods work. They commit to lifelong learning and improving student performance through data-driven and competency-aligned assessments.

We work with teachers to develop the abilities of English learners through new curricula and materials—such as cultural exchange programs or language courses for specific professional or academic purposes—that foster active learning, collaboration, and critical thinking. These courses demonstrate to students the value of learning English.

We help teachers pursue professional development in a meaningful way through networking opportunities and a suite of courses that help teachers become course designers, teacher trainers, researchers, and supervisors. Teachers develop the skills to lead in their field and their communities.

We further support teachers and encourage the expansion of TESOL training through our organizational strengthening work. We help communities create new TESOL centers and teacher professional development organizations, and we work with existing organizations to offer the teaching, curriculum, and management skills that catalyze high-quality English language learning.

World Learning is an international leader in TESOL thanks to our decades of experience. Through the School for International Training, we’ve been offering TESOL training for 50 years, offering a master’s degree and a certificate course. Through our programs, teachers around the world have gained the tools they need to flourish personally and professionally—and empower their own students to do the same.
